

JUDE S. WALKO [Producer]

Jude S. Walko grew up in Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, USA and received a Magna Cum Laude Bachelor of the Arts degree in Drama from the renowned University Of Georgia Drama Department in Athens, Georgia. He studied acting there before moving to Los Angeles, California where he began his career behind the camera as well. Jude resides in L.A. and Thailand where he also works as a producer, writer, actor and soon to be director. Jude is cofounder of Double Dog Dare Productions based out of San Francisco which has had much success in its film department including showings on Bravo, Independent Film Channel, Air Canada, Caroline's Comedy Club and several other venues.

He is owner of two additional production companies, Jaoshu Mai Productions, LLC and CineSiam International and owns the rights to Thailanime a highly visualized animation style which he helped develop alongside Anthony Conley of Neopets fame.

His experience is vast and encompasses over 50 films ranging anywhere in budget from a few million dollars to studio pictures over 100 million dollars. He has worked with scores of A-list celebrities, top industry producers and Oscar winning directors, actors and technical crew and is well connected in the film and music industries. It is his passion for film that keeps him very competitive in the entertainment industry. He is currently slated to write and direct "Backbone" an inspirational made-for-tv movie and "Stupid Bloody Tuesday Man" based on John Lennon's personal diaries, to star in Pop Art Film Factory's "Glass", "Wanted:Dead" and Roger Cormans "Ghost of the Forbidden City" and to produce "The Racketeer" with producing partner Frank Russo and Warner Brothers' release of "Devil's Playground", both of which he wrote.
